Schools and Industry Unite in Sponsoring Vast New Youth Movement to Fill Void in Education

TAKING cognizance of problems arising from the increasing complexity of modern society, business leaders and school authorities in Detroit are combining their efforts in the joint sponsorship of a new youth movement intended to supplement the work of the nation's educational system. Results of lasting benefit to the country are predicted by supporters of the plan, including School Superintendent Frank Cody, who cites the records of the 45 scholarship winners in the Fisher Body Craftsmen's Guild competitions as evidence of what may be expected. 1—Donald C. Communication

Orlando, Fla., Aug. 4th.

Dear Townspeople:
As you probably know I received the endorsement of the Townsend clubs of Florida at their convention in Lakeland last Saturday. I want to take this means of thanking you again for the confidence you have reposed in me and say again that I am for the Townsend Plan 100%.

Further, I want to pledge you that when I am in the United States senate you will have a champion who will fight for our plan on the floor in the committee rooms, in the cloak rooms, and in the corridors, and if we are not successful at first we will continue to carry on the fight.

May I ask your ardent support so that we may win this fight. The issue is short and quick and intensive action is necessary.

Sincerely yours,
C. O. ANDREWS.

ple enjoyed a steak fry at St. Lucie canal last Tuesday night with about 30 young people present. They consumed about ten pounds of steak besides other good things to eat. Everyone had an enjoyable time and they arrived in town just before the rain, so everyone was happy. Next Tuesday night the league will go in a body to Lake Harbor to the Everglades Young People's union meeting. They hope to bring back the banister for attendance.

Wednesday night there will be a debate at the regular mid-week meeting at the church. The subject and speakers will be announced later.

The Telephone keeps you In Touch

A TELEPHONE of your own keeps you in touch with friends, relatives, stores, the job, and social affairs—that certainly is worth more to you pay for a telephone.

Then think of the countless trips, the thousands of steps the telephone saves.

The protection it affords is even more important. When something goes wrong, when you must get help quickly, then, too, you will appreciate the real value of telephone service.

A telephone does so much and costs so little that it doesn't pay to try to do without one.

Why not call or visit the telephone Business Office and find out how easily and inexpensively you can enjoy telephone service in your own home?

Roman Advocate Of Everglades Park

Prints. Story of Herald Editor From Nation's Capital

Earl Roman, fishing editor of the Miami Herald, an ardent advocate of the Everglades National Park, in his column on Friday morning, July 17, made some very interesting remarks, which were being passed on to you.

"Every once in a while someone uttered a single sentence which aroused our extraordinary interest," he wrote. On a recent visit to Miami, one Charles Duffy, chief editor of the Everglades National Park, remarked that the establishment of the Everglades National Park would attract thousands. Following this true (common place) remark, Duffy went on to say: "Who ever heard of the area surrounding Yellowstone before it was established as a national park?"

Mr. Duffy's one sentence, we believe, sums up the national park situation nicely. It would be difficult indeed, to now find a citizen of the United States who has not heard of the Yellowstone National Park. Comprising an area embracing beautiful waterfalls, geysers, mountains, lakes and rivers, this park annually attracts hundreds of thousands. Yet not many years ago this area was practically unknown.

Many people have heard of the Everglades region, but not many people are familiar with it. It has been visited by very few persons. However, when it has been established as a national park it is reasonable to presume that it will attract more visitors than does the Yellowstone National Park. For one thing, it is nearer the larger centers of population and, too, Florida is already a mecca for tourists from every part of the country.

One who has ever visited Niagara Falls has failed to note the encroachments of commerce on this natural wonder. Think how much better it would have been had that area been set aside as a national park for all to enjoy equally. Instead of a factory and power house crowded locality exploited for the profit of the few.

We of Florida need the Everglades National Park. We need it as a conservatory for the natural resources it contains in such abundance. We need it as an attractor, for all time, to visitors from every corner of the earth. We anglers need it, perhaps more than all others, for it assures us always of an abundant supply of game fish to furnish us and future generations of anglers with unlimited sport.

Many of those who like to go hunting object to the park being established in the present maximum boundaries. They say that if these boundaries are observed it will deprive them of their hunting grounds. That is, in a great measure, true. There is no hunting allowed in national park areas.

On the other hand, what will happen to these hunting grounds if they are not included in the Everglades National Park? If the hunters believe they will always remain good game territory, untouched by the encroachments of civilization, they are due to disappointment. Some day they will be found to utilize them commercially and soon the hunter will tramp through the former fastnesses in vain.

Southern Home Makers Honored

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Martin of Knoxville

As a typical young Southern couple, with definite ideas about their home and children, the James M. Martins of Knoxville, Tenn., have been chosen as "reader-editors" of The Women's Home Companion, which has had a fortnight's job as editorial advisers to the staff of the magazine in New York.

The "reader-editor" plan, which brings young home makers from different sections of the country to the Companion's headquarters each month, is designed to keep the editors closely in touch with their readers and what they are thinking and doing.

During editorial conferences, Mr. and Mrs. Martin will discuss their theories about raising children, they have two little girls—about home furnishings, clothes, cooking and all other matters allied with the home.

Mrs. Martin, the former Julia Russell, is a native of Knoxville, a graduate of the University of Tennessee, and is now chiefly preoccupied with her home and children. Mr. Martin is well known throughout the South, where he represents a large manufacturing concern.

Star of The East Is Now Shown

Modern science now adds realism to the Biblical story of the Three Wise Men and the Sacred Star of the East. The new Rociucian Planetarium, being rushed to completion in San Jose, California, the fourth in the United States, will reveal astronomically the heavens as they were at the time of Christ. The apparatus being installed will project realistically into a huge fifty-foot dome the positions of the stars, planets and constellations as they were more than twenty centuries ago.

Materialistic astronomers contend, says Mr. S. L. Campbell, local member of the Rociucian Order, that the Biblical phenomenon was due to the rising of a helical star. Helical stars are only periodic.

Let's run the 10 percent off the highways or force them to observe our traffic laws and the rights of the 90 percent.
